Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, U.S.N.
Central Intelligence Agency

Dear Hilly:

Business in general carries on a function that is known to the public as market research. In the case of a number of industries, most particularly the chemical industry, the research is not what the name implies. In fact, it is a business intelligence agency much the same as is found in the Army and Navy Intelligence setup. This is a development of recent years, and I do not know what you know about it. It may well be that it is an old story to you.

Would it be possible for you to have lunch with him and me at The Carlton in Washington, D.C., on Tuesday, December 23rd at 12:30 p.m.? I would appreciate word from you in order that we may make our plans.

I think it is wonderful about your job. I do not envy you the responsibility you are carrying but feel secure that the problems we face are in good, competent hands.

Kindest regards.

Sincerely,
